

I believe that repealing the Indiana Telephone Privacy Law will result in numerous, annoying phone calls to many Indiana homes. The Telephone Privacy Law has allowed my family to spend many nights in peace and prevented many telemarketers from using unwanted and unwelcomed telephone calls to solicit business. Indiana citizens now have the right to spend nights at home without interruption and they also have the freedom to contact their credit providers, banks, phone companies, etc. without worrying about receiving hasseling calls to change service or add more service. This Law protects the citizens of the state and provides businesses the opportunity to serve their clients better by focusing on providing better customer service rather than providing phone calls to solicit more customers. My business will always remain loyal to customer service, because in the end it is how you are treated that determines customer satisfaction!
